ef Kings county, under command of Col. Hardenbrook, proceeded to the headquarters of the New York Veterans, at No. 62 Lispenard street, before noon, and, in accordance with previous arrangement, both bodies, under command of Col. Raymond, and escorted by the remnant of the First regument New York Volunteers, Captain Harper, marched to Brooklyn by way of the Fulton ferry. They numbered nearly 200 strong, and marched with the prevision of veterans. Fife and drum was the music employed for the occasion. The officers of the two corps present were Brigadier-Georarl Verplank, Colonels Hardenbrook and Jones, Major Daley, Adjustant-General Taylor, Adjustants Buttree, Fyfe and Hildreth; Captain Williams, Lieutenants Fox, St. John Baum, George and Cropley.

The New York Volunteers bore the fiss which they carried through the Mexican war, and we noticed several with medias which had been presented to them for gallast services on the lattlefield. The Veterans displayed four or five American flags, and a banner, on which was inscribed, "The Veterans of the War of 1812, of Kings county." They arrived on the Hooklyn side about 24 o'clock, and marched to the tomb of the martyrs of the prison ships of the Revolution, whose remains the buried in a vault under the Navy Yard, wall, in Hudson avenue. After forming in line in front of she entrance, Adjutant Hildreth, of the Kings county corps, mad apologies for non-attendance from Geo. Emery and Mr. Merrick, of Philadelphia; Gen. Lealie Combs, of Kentucky, Hon. W. H. Seward, of New York; and A. French, Eq., of Washington.

Gen. RYCKHAN then addressed the Veterans in a patriotic strain, tracing the avents of the Revolution and subsequent bistory of the country, and concluded by heping that the proceedings of this day would give an happetus to the project of raising a monument to the martyrs, which would result in its commencement on Fort Greene and spacely completion. After these proceedings, they marched into the Navy Yard, and were meetived by Captain Hudson. After exchanging civil

They were the command of Captain Wm. H. Sharp. e clock introduced the Rev. Mr. Chapin as the first spaaker.

Mr. Chapin observed that they came here as citizens to lend their aid towards the rearing of a monument to the memory of the patriots of the revolution who had died in the service of their country on the British prison ships in the Wallabout. They met here for one common object, and not as partisens, and said that he might just as well have been invited here to speak upon the insuffility of the atmosphere, or light of the sun, or of anything whose element is identical with the fulness and force of its very being. Patriotism and our sires were synonymous terms, interchangeable alike the one from the other. It would be as superficens as offensive to go into an argument, or even illustration of their patriotism, as it would be were he to stand up here and offer to teach the audience the elementary facts of our history, and say to them that from the sentiment of human liberty, in which alone all true patriotism took root and grew, separate colanies became one country, and British aggression was met and was checked by the organic spirit of a united land. It was well that the firing of guns and crackers on the 4th of July reminded us of the patriotism of our sires, and that by admiring their herolum we might be reminded of neglected duty, of honor we should pay to their ashes. The patriotism of our fathers was the patriotism ideas. They struck for principles which are as reminded of neglected duty, of noor we sould pay to their sahes. The patriotism of our fathers was the patriotism of ideas. They struck for principles which are as enduring as the ages and as firm as the world. The revolution was not the movement of a mob. but the march of deliberate counsel and well is dilabilities. They counted the cost, and calculated how 10,000 could meet 20,000 and overcome them. In conclusion, he urged upon all the necessity of rearing monuments to the heroes of the revolution, and not let it longer be said that republish are ungrateful.

Eloquent addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Storrs, Rev. Mr. Headly, J. L. Jarnegia, and George Taylor, Esqrs. The meeting terminated at a late hour.

The proceeds are to be applied to the preparation of a vault on Fort Greene for the martyrs' remains.

To the Citizens of the Southern and Wostern State. Learning from my agents and correspondents in various parts of the (ountry, that my dehicam aromatic Schapps is actersively counterfeited, especially in the Southern and Western States, and finding that the pirates daringly advertise their peractous decoptions under the name which belongs to my article, I think it necessary to caution the community against these vanders of prison in disguise. In introduced the Schiedam Aromatic Schapps for the purpose of supplying the medical faculty and the whole community with a pure medicinal spirit, which might be prescribed with confidence in all cases where stimulants were required, without producing the fasaful consequences which invariably result from using adulterated liquor. In order to reader assurance doubly sure, I had the article analyzed by chemists of world-wide celebrity, and submitted it for experiment test to the useands of distinguished medical practitioners.
